Your Role as a Sturgeon Guard

For over a decade, the annual Sturgeon Guarding Program has proven that citizens who watch over the river have greatly reduced poaching while helping to ensure the protection and proliferation of the species. As a guard, you are charged with safeguarding one of Michigan's most valuable natural resources—the lake sturgeon.

When the six week long spawning season begins in late April, sturgeon guards are assigned in shifts to sites along the river to stand watch and, if necessary, use cell phones provided by Sturgeon for Tomorrow (SFT) to contact Department of Natural Resources (DNR) Conservation Officers actively patrolling the area in support of the guarding effort. Aerial surveillance is also deployed to secure the area and deter illegal activity. Because we are guests on the river, our assignment is to watch the spawning areas, be visible, but remain as low key as possible. Each day, volunteers patrolling the river are kept up to date on how many fish have been seen or tagged and informed of action plans for the day. While we do our best to get all volunteers out on the riverbank to see fish, it is impossible to predict exactly when spawning will occur and invariably we must cancel some scheduled shifts if fish are simply not active. In case of inactivity, we make every attempt to reschedule volunteers into active periods. Coupled with our camping ambassador incentives, for many, the Sturgeon Guarding Program has become a family tradition.

Why Saving the Sturgeon is Vital

The lake sturgeon is considered a living fossil—a rare and threatened species throughout the United States. Each spring, as sturgeon migrate up rivers to spawn, a large percentage of adult sturgeon will be concentrated in a small spawning area along the rocky riverbanks where they are almost oblivious to nearby human activity making them susceptible to poaching. Conservation Officers, sturgeon guards and other conservation groups are concentrated in these areas 24 hours a day—devoting time and effort into protecting the spawning sturgeon from poachers. If poaching were left unchecked, this 136 million year old species would fall in population destroying the sport fishery.

What to Expect While on the River

If you are lucky enough to be on the river when the sturgeon spawn run is active, you may see biologists and researchers capturing, measuring, weighing and tagging sturgeon. When the researchers have time, they often stop and speak with students or guards along the river.

Important Checklists

Your efforts are appreciated!

Camping Ambassador Incentive Programs

Camping incentives encourage sturgeon guards to set up camp along the river, serving as sturgeon ambassadors. There is a great need for camper ambassadors to greet arriving guards, distribute hats, and explain roles and expectations to ensure smooth transitions between shifts.

All sturgeon guards receive sturgeon guard identification hats, those who meet the following guidelines also receive:

3-6 Nights Camping Ambassador

- A one year honorary (free) SFT membership.
- One signature sturgeon key fob.

7+ Nights Camping Ambassador

- Items listed above, plus:
- Free, complimentary dinner(s) at Annual SFT Banquet, including banquet recognition.
- Identification vest

Important Information & Updates

You may encounter groups of students on the river participating in educational activities. Often they are involved in replanting native plants that will mitigate erosion on the banks of the river or collecting macroinvertebrates (mayflies, insects, etc.) in the river.
